A thousand years OF HANOI'S CUISINE

In the autumn of the year 1010, King Ly Thai To moved the country's capital to Dai La region, which was formerly known as a land of great prosperity and abundance. Since then, the capital named Thang Long and now called Hanoi, has cultivated a rich culinary tradition that blends courtly sophistication with the flavors of folk cuisine, drawing on ingredients from everywhere to create delicious dishes that have remained renowned to this day.

Hanoi's cuisine THROUGH THE AGES

Hanoi, known for its rich assortment of diverse ingredients from the northern region, has experienced a cultural exchange with the East and West. This blend of local and foreign culinary influences has led to a unique fusion in its cuisine. Thus, the city's culinary history is closely intertwined with its urban development.

THE FEUDAL PERIOD

The land that is now Hanoi, from the beginning of the Common Era until becoming the capital of Dai Viet, has contributed a wide array of ingredients and dishes. Over the past two thousand years, Hanoi's cuisine has brought together ingredients from all over the land, creating a magnificent memory of the imperial capital's delights.

SOME OF THE TRIBUTE DISHES AND COURT CUISINE:

Ca cuong (giant waterbug), chim tra (kingfisher), chim cong (peacocks) (177), banana, coconut, longan (210), cha ruoi (clam worm fritter) (1288), ca diec (crucian carps), doi moi (hawksbill sea turtle), sea crab (1363), coconut water (1399), Tay Ho fish, Thinh Quang longan (1435), salted deer meat, dua muoi (pickled mustard greens), rau can (water celery), apple, mung bean (1514), watermelon (1545), com Vong (Vong Village green sticky rice), West Lake sam cam (Eurasian coot), rau muong Linh Chieu (water spinach) (19th century).

(According to The Complete Annals of Dai Viet and Geography Book, 1435 by Nguyen Trai)

MODERN DAY

The cuisine mirrors the city's modernization as new dishes and new ways of eating are created to cater to modern tastes and lifestyles while preserving traditional flavors and high standards. Whether a fine dining restaurant, street vendor, or takeaway food, Hanoi cuisine can always satisfy your taste.

THE FRENCH COLONIAL PERIOD

The late 19th century marked the introduction of French dishes, ingredients, and cooking techniques, resulting in a captivating East-West culinary fusion in Hanoi.

SOME FAMOUS DISHES WERE INTRODUCED DURING THIS PERIOD:

Banh mi (bread), cha ca (Hanoi-style grilled fish), com tam gio cha (rice with lean pork paste), pho ga (chicken pho), egg coffee, and beer.

The "Food" Streets

Hanoi Old Quarter has many streets named after food that are still present today:

- CHA CA (Fishcake Street)
- HANG BUN (Vietnamese Vermicelli Street)
- HANG CA (Fish Street)
- HANG CHAO (Congee Street)
- HANG DAU (Bean Street)
- HANG DUONG (Sugar Street)
- HANG GA (Chicken Street)
- HANG KHOAI (Potato Street)
- HANG MAM (Fish Sauce Street)
- HANG MUOI (Salt Street)
- HANG RUOI (Sandworm Street)

The Subsidy PERIOD

Starting from the complete reunification of Vietnam (1975) to the beginning of Doi Moi (Economic Reforms) Era in 1986, the Subsidy Period and the collective zone apartments fostered a distinctive culinary style in Hanoi: creativity amid adversity, and garnish within confined spaces. The simplicity of the subsidy menu harmonizes with the nostalgic ambiance of collective zone apartments, which now draw the interest of tourists.

Seasonal delights

Nestled in the fertile Red River Delta, Hanoi enjoys 4 seasons - Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. Each season brings its own unique weather and specialties, giving rise to the concept of "Thoi tran" (seasonal delights) in Hanoi's culinary culture.

A WALK IN Spring

Spring begins with the Lunar New Year and marks the season of traditional festivals. Tourists flock to the city to experience the cherished custom of spring traveling - an opportunity to pray for peace and good fortune while enjoying the scenery and festivities, and savoring the delicious dishes of the new year.

TAY HO TEMPLE FESTIVAL

Together with Hoan Kiem Lake, West Lake is one of the most famous lakes in Hanoi. Among more than 20 sacred temples and pagodas that encircle the lake, the Tay Ho Temple stands out as the most renowned, dedicated to Mother Goddess Lieu Hanh, one of the "Four Immortals" in Vietnamese folk religion.

- 📍 52 Dang Thai Mai, Tay Ho Dist.
- 🕒 Regular days: 6am - 6pm
1st & 15th day of the month
(Lunar calendar): 6am - 9pm

West Lake's Spring Specialities

In the chilly spring drizzle, the food stalls near Tay Ho Temple are ready with warm specialties to serve visitors. Bun oc (snail vermicelli soup) is one of the favorites among spring travelers, perhaps for its flavorful broth with a light sour taste from "giam bong", a Vietnamese vinegar.

Around this time, the banh tom (shrimp cake) stalls are also packed with customers. While this batter-dipped shrimp patty can now be found in many places throughout Hanoi, enjoying these shrimp cakes right where they originated - by the breezy shores of West Lake - still offers a unique pleasure for visitors.

Nourished by the Red River's rich soil, vividly blooming flowers around West Lake charm visitors to come and admire their splendor in the glow of daylight.

HUONG PAGODA FESTIVAL

First constructed in the late 17th century, Huong Pagoda is a sacred site known for its pristine nature and an extensive system of temples and pagodas. With its invaluable cultural and historical significance, the Huong Pagoda Festival, held annually from the 6th day of the first lunar month, is one of the largest and most important festivals for Vietnamese people.

Visitors can buy Huong Son's specialties along the main roads leading to the temple.

- 📍 Huong Son Commune, My Duc Dist.

Try the tastes of the mountains

Among Huong Son's unique local specialties, rau sang, a young leaf of a tree that only grows on limestone mountains, has a slightly sweet taste and is rich in nutrients. Huong Son apricots are mildly sour with a light fragrance. The Chinese yam here is another local delicacy, often cooked into a silky and nutty yam sweet soup with honey. Banh che lam (Vietnamese nutty ginger sticky rice bar) is a perfect sweet treat to accompany green tea.

CO LOA FESTIVAL

Co Loa Citadel is the oldest citadel in Vietnam and has twice been chosen as the capital (once during the Au Lac period in the 3rd century BC and later during the reign of King Ngo Quyen in the 10th century).

Co Loa Festival (the 6th day of the first lunar month) has long been celebrated to commemorate King Thuc Phan - An Duong Vuong, who established the kingdom of Au Lac and built Co Loa Citadel as its imperial capital.

Besides its rituals, the Co Loa Festival features a variety of folk games (human chess, wrestling), along with traditional performing arts like water puppetry and quan ho folk singing.

Exploring Co Loa Festival's cuisine.

During the festival, dishes such as bong chu (a kind of puffed rice said to be the field rations of the Co Loa Citadel soldiers) and Mach Trang stir-fried vermicelli with celery (a thousand-year-old dish once served to kings) are must-tries.

Visitors can also explore the Sa Market, where local products are exchanged and traditional community culture is preserved. This market is famous for simple snacks such as banh day (round sticky rice cake), banh duc (plain rice flan), bong gao (puffed rice), bun cua (crab vermicelli soup), chao trai (mussel congee), etc.

Wandering IN THE SUMMER

Summer breathes life into Hanoi's streets, from the lush greenery to the fragrant lotus ponds and vendors' flower-laden bicycles passing through the city. If you are feeling hot under the blazing sunshine, there are a variety of refreshing drinks and treats to enjoy. The red flamboyant trees and the purple crepe myrtle trees shade the streets, yet creating stunning images that capture the spirit of youth.

REFRESHING SUMMER TREATS

Hanoi offers a wide variety of refreshing dishes, both vegetarian and non-vegetarian, that leave you feeling cool and make the sun feel less intense.

Heat-relieving draconplum

The draconplum fruit contributes to the distinctive sourness of Hanoi's cuisine. The signature snack is a draconplum pickled in fish sauce and a sweet and sour drink is also made from draconplum.

Duck braised with draconplum offers a rich, indulgent taste without being overwhelming. The tender meat, fluffy taro, crunchy-water spinach and water mimosa make such a cooling "braised" dish.

The enchanted AUTUMN OF HANOI

Abiding to the laws of nature: Flowers bloom in spring then fruits ripe in autumn. Autumn cuisine is a celebration of the dishes made from nature's finest offerings in Hanoi.

MID-AUTUMN FESTIVAL IN HANOI

The Mid-Autumn Festival is celebrated on the 15th day of the 8th lunar month, when the moon shines brightest, and the crops are harvested. People gather to enjoy the Mid-Autumn Festival feast with various fruits, banh nuong (baked mooncake), and banh deo (sticky rice mooncake). Children also eagerly await the Mid-Autumn Festival as they receive traditional toys exclusive to this season and join in festive events such as lion dances and lantern parades.

Xuan Dinh Village's traditional mooncake

Xuan Dinh Village is renowned for its century-old history of "crafting" mooncakes. In addition to the usual fillings such as pork fat, sausage, lime leaves, lotus seeds, ham, kumquat and nutty mung beans, the local specialties of Tu Lien Precinct, Tay Ho Dist. are a must to produce batches of golden-brown banh nuong (baked mooncake) and banh deo (sticky rice mooncake).

Fruits of autumn

The fresh, citrusy aroma of ripe buoi (pomelo); the vibrant color varies from green, and orange to red, resembling tiny lanterns of hong (persimmon); the pleasant, sweet aroma lingers of thi (gold apple); the creamy, custard-like taste of ripe na (custard apple); all of them are indispensable parts of Hanoi's Mid-Autumn Festival trays.

Hang Ma, the "Mid-Autumn Festival" street

Hang Ma Street is well-known as the largest place to find Mid-Autumn Festival goods in Hanoi. Visitors come here not only to shop but also to immerse themselves in the lively atmosphere and admire the vibrant colors of the Mid-Autumn Festival.

Hau Ai Lanterns

Hau Ai Village, located in Van Canh commune, Hoai Duc Dist., is the main supplier of star lanterns, fish lanterns, paper scholars, and many other hand-crafted, traditional Mid-Autumn Festival toys for Hanoi.

THE FEAST OF AUTUMN

Green sticky rice

THE HEAVENLY "PEARL"

Com is the quintessential autumn delight of Hanoi. After the young glutinous rice is harvested, threshed for the grains, and then roasted, they must go through 5-7 rounds of pounding to remove the husk, revealing the thin, green, chewy, and fragrant com grains.

While com can be transformed into various dishes such as banh com (com cake), com xao nuoc dua (stir-fried com with coconut milk), or xoi com (com sticky rice), Hanoians prefer to enjoy it directly. Wrapped in fresh lotus leaves, the fragrant com grains perfectly capture the essence of autumn in Hanoi.

AUTUMN STREETS IN HANOI

Arriving unexpectedly, autumn in Hanoi is always an event that sparks excitement across the city. Streets, trees, and lakes are bathed in golden sunlight, with gentle breezes that ease the lingering summer heat. During this vibrant golden season, Hanoians often gather on the city's iconic autumn streets, enjoying the scenery that only comes around once a year.

Thanh Nien Street

THE ROMANTIC ROAD

Stretching just 1km between West Lake and Truc Bach Lake, Thanh Nien Street has become Hanoi's most romantic destination, especially for the youth.

Recommended activity

Witness the "golden" autumn sun casting its glow over the surface of West Lake at sunset.

Also try

- Explore the thousand-year-old Tran Quoc Pagoda (46 Thanh Nien St.), recognized by website Wanderlust (UK) as "Top 10 Most Beautiful Pagodas in the World".
- Visit Quan Thanh Temple (at the corner of Thanh Nien - Quan Thanh St.) to admire the 4-ton bronze statue of Heavenly Deity Tran Vu, a guardian deity of ancient Hanoi.

Hoang Dieu Street

THE HISTORICAL ROAD

Adjacent to the Le Dynasty's Imperial Citadel of Thang Long, Hoang Dieu Street passes through significant landmarks like the Imperial Citadel complex, the Ba Dinh political center, or beautiful villas among lush gardens.

Recommended activity

Stroll beneath the canopy of old nacre trees that stretch for 1.3 kilometers of the street, basking in the golden morning light.

Also try

- Delve into Vietnam's dynastic history at the Imperial Citadel of Thang Long (19C Hoang Dieu St.). The night tour here will take you back in time!
- Stop by 28A Dien Bien Phu St. to discover the Flag Tower of Hanoi - an iconic symbol of the capital.

Phan Dinh Phung Street

THE FLORAL STREET

Located along the northern moat of Hanoi's ancient citadel, Phan Dinh Phung Street features broad sidewalks shaded by three rows of towering dragonplum trees. Not only in autumn, when the leaves turn a golden tone, but the street is also an endless inspiration for photographers and travelers all year round.

Recommended activity

Capture stunning photos with flower vendors under the shimmering autumn sunlight.

Also try

- Visit historical sites such as Cửa Bắc (Northern Gate) at 51B Phan Dinh Phung St. or Cửa Bắc Parish Church at 56 Phan Dinh Phung St.
- Relax at Van Xuan Flower Garden, next to Hang Dau Water Tank, which dates back to 1894.

Other popular activities to enjoy Hanoi autumn include drinking coffee by Hoan Kiem Lake, enjoying street com (green sticky rice) near St. Joseph Cathedral, and taking photos at Phung Hung "Mural" Street.

In Hanoi, winter temperatures can drop to single digits. Still, it is a welcome change in a tropical land that typically endures hot and humid months. If you find yourself in Hanoi during the season, dedicate a day to wander through the cold and uncover the warmth nestled within the city's streets.

Winter IN HANOI

MORNING

Wake up early when the street lights are still on, bundle up, and wander through the narrow alleys and old houses; you will find the usual hustle of the city retreats making room for a drowsy, nostalgic Hanoi in the tranquil winter morning.

On those chilly days when the Northeast monsoon bites at your fingertips, there's nothing better than going to a familiar street vendor and enjoying the warm, comforting flavors of Hanoi's winter treats.

NOON

After a morning immersing yourself in the charm of Hanoi's Old Quarter, noon presents an excellent opportunity to explore the elegant, classic beauty of the old streets surrounding Hoan Kiem Lake, which were meticulously planned and constructed by the French in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. You can visit the National Museum of History (1 Trang Tien St.), Thang Long Puppet Theater (57B Dinh Tien Hoang St.), galleries and art spaces on Trang Tien St., or spend time strolling around the streets, buying Hanoi-style quilted jackets at Chan Con Cong Vintage (7A Nha Tho St.), Quilted Jacket Shop (21 Hang Hom).

Winter lunch is the perfect time for broth-based dishes to take center stage. In Hanoi, you'll find not just pho but also bun (vermicelli), my (noodles), and mien (glass noodles) served in steaming broth. The sight and aroma of these dishes are enough to warm the hearts of diners on a chilly winter day.

Besides broth-based dishes, sizzling dishes served right off the hot pan are also popular for lunch.

AFTERNOON SNACKS

As the afternoon sets in, it's the perfect time to indulge in the "symphony" of Hanoi's street snacks.

THANH TRI – THUONG TIN – PHU XUYEN

Savour chrysanthemum wine, discover the art of making votive paper and wrap up the journey with a collection of photos at ancient houses that merge Eastern and Western influences – the unique experience that is offered exclusively on the “Heritage Road in South of Thang Long – Hanoi” tour linking Thanh Tri, Thuong Tin, and Phu Xuyen districts.

Ngau Village

Ngau Village is known for its craft of brewing chrysanthemum wine. Here, visitors can learn about the process of making and distilling it.

Chrysanthemum wine is intricate in its choice of ingredients (specially grown chrysanthemums, yeast made from 36 types of traditional Chinese medicinal herbs, and premium glutinous rice), carefully cooked and then buried underground for at least one year before tasting. Together with lotus stamen wine (now lost), they were celebrated as the two most famous wines of the capital city 500 years ago.

📍 Tam Hiep Commune, Thanh Tri Dist.

Phuc Am Village

Phuc Am Village is well-known for its tradition of making votive paper. The village is bustling during traditional holidays and Tet.

Votive paper offerings refer to papercrafts burned in traditional deity or ancestor worship ceremonies.

📍 Duyen Thai Commune, Thuong Tin Dist.

Cuu Village

A village famous for its architecture that blends Asian and European styles. The village’s ancient houses feature Gothic-style roofs and arches reminiscent of Renaissance architecture, yet alongside them are pairs of Hân-Nom (Sino-Vietnamese characters) couplets or familiar symbols of the mythical beast “Nghe”.

Once home to some of the best suit tailors in Hanoi during the French Colonial Era, nowadays, visitors still can have a fine suit made by skilled tailors of Cuu Village.

📍 Van Tu Commune, Phu Xuyen Dist.

💰 Suit tailoring cost: From VND1,500,000

LOCAL DELICACIES

Fine dining

HANOI'S CULINARY EXCELLENCE

In continuous cultural exchange, Hanoi both shares and absorbs culinary quintessence from various parts of the world, from daily dishes to haute cuisine. The fine dining scene, featuring luxurious restaurants serving cuisines from Asia to Europe, enriches the capital's opulent experiences.

CHINESE CUISINE

The Chinese immigrants came to Hanoi quite early, introducing their culinary culture to the local cuisine. In Hanoi, visitors can enjoy familiar street foods such as chi ma phu (black sesame soup), luc tao xa (mung bean soup), sui din (glutinous rice balls), mi van than (wonton noodles), as well as classy culinary spaces.

Hanoian Seasonings

Hanoians are particular about the way they eat and drink. That's why seasonings, the supporting but indispensable element to a perfect dish, are highly valued in the culinary scene of Hanoi.

Of all the seasonings, fresh herbs are indispensable and present everywhere, from daily meals to street snacks. The star of Hanoi fresh herbs is hung Lang, a kind of basil originally grown at Lang Village and has long been a crucial ingredient in Hanoian cookery.

Hung Lang has a refined and pure aroma, similar to mint, but without the spice. This quality allows the herb to pair well with many dishes, whether stir-fried, cooked, or eaten fresh with other vegetables. Some of the best dishes to enjoy with hung Lang include bun cha (Vietnamese vermicelli noodles with grilled pork patties), spring rolls, and fish dishes.

Another famous seasoning of Hanoi comes from... an insect. Back when Hanoi's outskirts were still covered in rice fields, ca cuong (giant water bug) were frequently found. Male ca cuong has two tiny sacs containing a fragrant liquid known as their essence. Farmers working in the fields would catch these bugs and squeeze a few drops of the cinnamon liquid into their dipping fish sauce.

Ca cuong fish sauce is an exquisite condiment with a slightly spicy and intense flavour, perfect for dipping vegetables or meat. This sauce is best enjoyed with steaming hot banh cuon (Vietnamese steamed rice crepes). Bun thang (Hanoi combo vermicelli soup) is another signature dish of Hanoi cuisine that uses ca cuong essence. While shrimp paste is the primary seasoning that defines this dish, those with a keen taste will appreciate the slight spiciness of the ca cuong essence mixed into this flavourful dish.

The art of using seasonings plays a significant role in creating the charm of Hanoi food.

WEATHER

Each season of Hanoi shows its unique beauty.

Spring marks the end of the sharp cold spells, leaving only a slight chill as new buds begin to sprout.

Summer brings scorching sunshine but is compensated by cooling showers and shady rows of red poinciana and purple crape myrtle trees.

In Autumn, the most ideal time from late September to October, brings lovely clear skies and a gentle coolness. Street vendors selling flowers and fragrant com (young rice) add vibrant touches to a scenery of red and yellow leaves, making Hanoi more poetic than ever.

Winter's arrival with its signature bitter coldness provides a contrast backdrop to the city's lively atmosphere before the biggest festival season of the year.

TRANSPORTATION

Hanoi's streets are filled with motorbikes, making them the ideal personal vehicle for moving around the city's small alleys and narrow streets.

Besides, there are various kinds of public transportation to meet your travel plans.

TRADITIONAL FESTIVALS

Some noteworthy traditional festivals you might want to attend:

- The Dong Da Mound Festival is one of the oldest festivals in Hanoi, to commemorate the Ngoc Hoi victory when King Quang Trung defeated the Qing invaders in 1789.
📅 The 5th day of the Lunar New Year
- In addition to spiritual pilgrimage, the Huong Pagoda Festival also offers many delightful experiences such as boating along Yen Stream, climbing to Huong Tich Cave, listening to ca tru folk singing or watching a khai son (mountain-opening) ceremony.
- The Thay Pagoda Festival takes place annually with the main rituals including Moc Duc (statue bathing), censer settlement ceremony, worship ceremony, processions, and folk games.
📅 From the 5th to the 7th of the third lunar month
- Giong Festival is one of Hanoi's springtime festivals. The ceremonies honour Giong (or Phu Dong Heavenly God), a god in Vietnamese legendary, who helped protect the country from invaders.
📅 From the 6th to the 8th of the first lunar month
- The Trieu Khuc Village Festival occurs yearly with unique rites, including the parade of the royal decree and the distinctive "con di danh bong" dance, where young men dress as women to sing and dance.
📅 From the 9th to the 12th of the first lunar month
